Question Numbers 1 to 5 :

Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow :

Dogs and cats should never be permitted to eat chocolate, because chocolate works like a poison on their bodies. Chocolate contains a chemical called Theobromine, which is similar to caffeine. Human bodies are able to process the Theobromine without any ill-side effects, but dogs and cats cannot.

Different types of chocolate contain different amounts of Theobromine. It would take twenty ounces of milk chocolate to kill a twenty pound dog, but only two ounces of baker's chocolate or six ounces of semi-sweet chocolate. The amounts, of course, are much smaller for a cat, whose body weight is typically less than that of a dog. Most Cats are not naturally attracted to eating chocolate, but many dogs are. Dogs, by nature, will sample nearly anything that they see their masters eating, so pet owners must take care to keep all chocolate products well out of reach of their dogs and cats.

Question Numbers 73 to 76 :

Read the following passage and answer the questions :

An American or British person might be looking their client in the eye to show that they are paying full attention to what is being said, but if that client is from Japan or Korea, they might find the direct eye contact awkward or even disrespectable. In parts of South America and Africa prolonged eye contact could also be seen as challenging authority. In the Middle East, eye contact across genders is considered in appropriate, although eye contact within a gender could signify honesty and truthfulness.

Having an increased awareness of the possible differences in expectations and behavior can help us avoid cases of miscommunication, but it is vital that we also remember that cultural stereotypes can be detrimental to building good business relationships.

Although national cultures could play a part in shaping the way we behave and think, we are also largely influenced by the region we came from.

Read the following passage and answer the questions :

The analysis of handwriting has a long history. some say it goes back to Roman times. Modern graphology began early in the nineteenth century. Allan Conway, a professional graphologist for twelve years says, "handwriting says more about you than many chosen words, simply because you cannot hide in your handwriting it's not really your hand that's writing, but your brain. It's your personality frozen in ink. Despite public scepticism, graphology plays a covert role in human resource management. Many companies use it for executive recruitment and analysis. Graphology tells them about the candidates' temperaments, highlighting both weaknesses and strengths. There are about three hundred movements on an unlined A4 page of writing and students must find and interpret them all. He also needs to know three things about the writers: Their sex, their age and if they are left or right handed. Then he looks for sixteen dominant elements including the size of the writing, the pressure, the speed and slant of the words, how connected the characters are as well as the form of the connections. The principles, according to Conway, are straight forward. The base line-whether the writing goes straight across the page or slants up and down-helps to determine the writer's state of mind. A very upward baseline shows a creative, ambitious and outgoing person. A slightly downward one can reveal dissatisfaction or unhappiness, though it could simply be a sign of fatigue.
