Q3 Discuss how there is greater give and take among disciplines today ?

Answer. The interdependence among different disciplines results in the maximum and integrated development of the fields. The concepts of sociology are connected with the economy as it lays the premises for the unequal economic distribution of resources among different sections of the society because of sociological stratification like caste, class, gender etc. It underlines the basic division of the employment options among the masses on the lines of sociological differences which further dictate the 'occupational mobility' of people.

The inherent connection between the history and other subjects helps in the historical relevance and reconstruction of different civilisations and ethnographic characteristics. The historical authorships and the compositions have an intrinsic connection with the sociological parameters as they affect the age , space and time of sources. The field of anthropology has also deep connections with the subject of sociology in dealing with different spheres of social groups through the effect of scientism.
