Sl. No.2QBID:8322052

Read the following paragraph and answer the question given below :

“(M)acrohistorical forces of transformation are incorporated Into everyday practice in rural China in the last decade of the twentieth century to form a unique moment of social existence. Everyday practices are the fruits of larger society, but at the same time these practices also transform those forces in ways that reflect the specific historical situations in which they are adopted. These adoptions in a given locality constitute, to borrow a term from Wittgenstein, “a form of life,” which may be defined in the context as the everyday appropriation of macrosocial transformation... In this sense, the economic reform in the past two decades may be understood as re-form (ation)” of historical elements derived from three main social sources: the traditional, the revolutionary, and the modern.”

What, according to the author, are the forces that transform each other?
