b) Educational Uses of Computer

Computers have become an important part of modern education. They make learning easier, faster and more interesting. Students can use computers to collect information, prepare projects and improve their knowledge.

Computers provide access to online books, educational videos, dictionaries and learning websites. Students can learn different subjects through educational apps and online classes. They can also prepare presentations, type assignments and practise difficult topics with the help of educational software.

Teachers also use computers to prepare lessons, show pictures and videos, conduct tests and maintain students' records. Computers make classroom teaching more attractive and effective.

Thus, computers are very useful in education. They save time, provide a large amount of information and help both teachers and students learn better. However, computers should be used wisely and mainly for educational purposes.

c) Uses of Newspaper

A newspaper is an important source of information in our daily life. It contains news about our country and the world. It helps us to know what is happening around us.

Newspapers provide information about politics, sports, education, science, business, weather and entertainment. Students can improve their general knowledge and vocabulary by reading newspapers regularly. They can also learn about important national and international events.

Newspapers are useful for finding job advertisements, examination notices, scholarships and other opportunities. They also contain advertisements about houses, shops, products and services. Newspapers help people form opinions about important social issues and encourage them to think about the problems of society.

Reading a newspaper is a good habit. It keeps us informed, improves our language skills and increases our knowledge. Therefore, newspapers are very useful in our everyday life
