SECTION – A : READING COMPREHENSION

(1 - 5) Read the following passage carefully.

Life for the dog took a new turn now. He came to take the place of the old woman. He lost his freedom completely. His world came to be circumscribed by the limits of the white cord came to be circumscribed by the limits of the white cord which the ribbon-vendor had spared. He had to forget wholesale all his old life-all his old hunts. He simply had to stay on forever at the end of that string. When he saw other dogs, friends or foes, instinctively he spring up, tugging the string, and this invariably earned him a kick from his master. 'Rascal, want to tumble me down-have sense.'

'Rascal, want to tumble me down-have sense.' IN a few days the dog learnt to discipline his instinct and impulse. He ceased to take notice of other dogs, even if they came up and growled at his side. He lost his own orbit of movement and contact with his fellow creatures.

[The Blind Dog]
