Read the passage carefully and answer questions that follow :

There is no doubt that the market as a reality and political economy as a theory played an important role in the liberal critique. But liberalism is neither the consequence nor the development of these; rather, the market played, in the liberal critique, the role of a "test", a locus of privileged experience where one can identify the effects of excessive governmentality and even weigh their significance; the analysis of the mechanisms of "dearth" or more generally, of the grain trade in the middle of the eighteenth century, was meant to show the point at which governing was always governing too much. Therefore, an analysis to make visible, in the form of evidence, the formation of the value and circulation of wealth—or, on the contrary, an analysis pre-supposing the intrinsic invisibility of the connection between individual profit-seeking and the growth of collective wealth—economics, in any case, shows a basic incompatibility between the optimal development of the economic process and maximisation of government procedures. It is by this, more than the play of ideas, the French or English economists broke away from mercantilism and commercialism; they freed reflection on economic practice from the hegemony of the "reason of state" and from the saturation of governmental intervention. By using it as a measure of "governing too much", they placed it at the limit of governmental action. Liberalism does not derive from juridical thought any more than it does from an economic analysis. It is not the idea of a political society, but the result of search for a liberal technology of government.

Read the passage below and choose the correct answer for the question

On the eve of world Elder Abuse Awareness Day, NGO Helpage India released its Annual survey report based on the study of care givers (2050 respondents) in 20 cities of India. The annual survey is yearly focussed on abandonment and abuse of elders, but this year the NGO chose to investigate care giving because "despite the abuse elders might face at the hand of their adult children at house, they choose to remain within the family ambit". More than one third (35 percent) of the respondents said that they "never" felt happy or satisfied taking care of the elderly, while nearly 14 percent felt "rarely" happy. Asked to rate the job of taking care of the elderly on a "burden Scale" that offered three options – 'mild to moderate' 'moderate to severe' and 'severe' – 15 percent respondents checked the box for 'Severe'. The survey also showed that a majority of daughters-in-law were caregivers themselves. Over half of the daughters-in-law interviewed said that they assisted elders in the crucial ways such as using the Telephone, Shopping, Preparing meals, housekeeping, washing clothes and taking medicines among other things. A telling figure in the report reflection the helplessness of what the survey calls the "sandwich generations – people with aging parents and childrens. It can be concluded that the society has wrong perceptions about daughters-in-law.

Read the passage below and choose the correct answer for the questions

There are three important aspects of relationships in the society: economic, political and social relationships. The societal relationships are between different communities and classes on one hand, between state and people and between people on the other. In India, the economic relations are posing a major challenge since its inception as a modern state. Despite several policy shifts, the gap between the rich and poor and the proportion of poor people, have not declined. A major problem is the vast rural population in India, which has not fully participated in the process of development. The political relationships in the country suffer from social backwardness of the people. The low representation of women, minorities and backward classes in governance has led to the political tension and exploitation of common man by elite classes.
