Comprehension:

Michaelangelo is famous for having successfully interpreted the human body. His great achievement is that of the painting of David whose hands reach out as a sign of human capability and potential. It is assumed that the time he lived was ripe for exchange of knowledge, development in science and matured enough to advance the horizon of investigation in all fields. Renaissance humanism stressed on a serious rethink on the nature of art that focussed on accurate details. In painting and sculpture, artists focussed on not so casual but verifiable and minute details. Michaelangelo's paintings are no exception to it. In a study published in the journal of the Royal Society of medicine, a group of surgeons are of the opinion that the great master was "afflicted by an illness involving his joints". They have used his portraits as evidence to argue their view. During his life, he complained of what he felt to be 'gout'. Later he complained of his sore and stiff hands which the doctors would find to be natural for someone who was engaged in handmade art. The doctors found corroboration of those claims in portraits of the artist that show a hanging left hand with both degenerative and non-degenerative changes. They attribute the pain not just to arthritis, but to the stress of hammering and chiseling and note that though the master was seen hammering days before his death at an old age, he did not write or sign his own letters before his death. In recent times there have been attempts to diagnose famous artists with diseases that were not known during their time. This practice has raised many questions, especially on the issue of ethics in research. It is also inferred from authentic analysis that Michaelangelo persisted in his work until his last days. This theory would emphasize that his artistic subject defied his physical infirmities.

Comprehension:

Relationship is the soul of social casework. It is the principle of life which vivifies the process of study, diagnosis and treatment and makes casework a living, warmly human experience. It would be hard to exaggerate the importance of the relationship in casework, not only because it is essential to effective casework, but also because it is the practical living out of our basic convictions about the value and dignity of the human person. It is based on the philosophy of life which is both realistic and idealistic, which encompasses matter and spirit, reason and faith, time and eternity... The casework relationship is the dynamic interaction of attitudes and emotions between the caseworker and the client, with the purpose of helping the client achieve a better adjustment between himself and his environment.... There are natural relationships such as husband-wife, parent-child, professional relationships such as physician-patient, and many others such as friend-friend, customer-salesman. The casework relationship differs from others on a number of points. It differs from the parent-child relationship in that the casework relationship is temporary, and the emotional component is not so deep and penetrating. The equality and mutuality in a friend-friend relationship is absent in casework. The caseworker and the client are fundamentally equal as human beings; but in casework the caseworker is the helping person, while the client is the person receiving help.

Comprehension:

Cloward and Ohlin have identified three major types of delinquent subcultures viz. the criminal, the conflict and the retreatist. A particular one that emerges in any given sociocultural setting will be a function of the availability of illegitimate opportunities. The first is characterised by illegal money making activities, the second emphasizes acts of violence and gang wars and the third emphasizes drug use and other kicks. Criminal subculture tends to arise in lower-class neighbourhood where successful and big time criminals reside and are also willing to associate with juveniles. Juveniles in this social class do not have conventional role models of successful people who have achieved their success through legitimate channels. The child has an opportunity to actually perform illegitimate roles as such activities find support in his neighbourhood milieu. Conflict subculture is found in areas where there is no alliance between criminal and conventional elements. This subculture features violence and/or threat of violence as a method of getting status. In such neighbourhoods young people tend to organise themselves into community gangs contending with one another for 'rap' through a show of violence and toughness. Social controls are also weak in these areas. Retreatist subculture is manifested through or in the use of drugs. It is found in areas where either repressive police measures make street fighting quite dangerous or where moral and other inhibitions against the use of violence exist. Individuals denied access to 'criminal' and 'conflict' opportunities tend to withdraw into a world of narcotic drugs. Cloward and Ohlin are of the view that if there is little or no access to drugs, it is not likely that the retreatist subculture would develop. Similarly, where the means of violence are not available to juveniles, a violence oriented subculture would most probably not develop.
